

Economic Prosperity for All: How Do We Get There?

Sponsored by:

The Planning Department, City of San Diego

- What types of employment land use should the City encourage?
- How can we create a diverse and vibrant economy?
- How can we provide equitable access to education?
- How can we provide affordable housing for everyone in San Diego?
- What do we need to do to provide a strong standard of living for all of our citizens?
- How do we increase mobility and minimize traffic congestion?

Join us as we discuss the issues and create collaborative solutions.

Panel:

Councilmember Scott Peters is Chair of the City's Land Use and Housing Committee and serves on the Rules, Finance and Intergovernmental Relations Committee. He is also a member of the Coastal Commission and the California Commission on Tax Policy in the New Economy.

Element Interest Areas

To assist our staff with the General Plan Updates, we request that citizens provide input and suggestions on important element-related issues. If you are interested in receiving information or joining our discussions, specify your particular areas of interest below and return this form to us in the mail. Thank you!

- ☐ Conservation Element – Conserving and restoring our resources (air, water, energy, habitat, open space) and promoting a sustainable future.
- ☐ Economic Prosperity Element – Assuring that land for employment is available, addressing education and workforce issues, and promoting business development.
- ☐ Housing Element – Providing an adequate supply of housing for every economic level and demographic group.
- ☐ Land Use Element – Bridging between community plans and the City's General Plan, and developing relationships between land use and transportation systems.
- ☐ Mobility Element – Improving mobility through improved transit services, pedestrian amenities, bicycling facilities, and street networks.
- ☐ Public Facilities Element – Addressing adequate public facilities and services (e.g. fire stations and libraries) in all City communities.
- ☐ Recreation Element – Improving equitable access to parks, protecting and enhancing regional parks and expanding recreation options for communities.
- ☐ Urban Design Element – Enhancing San Diego's livability, distinctiveness, diverse neighborhoods, and transit amenities to achieve pedestrian-oriented villages.
